News UPDATE

Reduced hours

President George W. Bush declared today a National Day of Mourning for all federal agencies out of respect to former President Ronald Reagan.

Most garrison agencies will be closed. Dining facilities 4, 6 and 11 will remain open. Other hours include: Post Exchange open 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; PXtra open 10 a.m.-6 p.m.; troop concessions open 11 a.m.-4 p.m.; Class Six closed; theater closed.

All outpatient clinics at Eisenhower Army Medical Center will be closed and appointments scheduled for Friday will be rescheduled. All urgent and emergency services will be operating as normal.

The commissary is open normal hours.

Army birthday

The Army celebrates its 229th birthday Monday, which is also the 227th anniversary of Flag Day. Fort Gordon marks the occasion with a cake cutting at 10 a.m. Monday in Conrad Hall.

Signaleer makes O-7

Col. Jeffrey Foley, director of Command and Control, Communications and Computer Systems at U.S. Central Command, was promoted to brigadier general. Foley is the former chief of staff here.

Signal anniversary

The 144th Signal Anniversary Ball is 6 p.m. June 23 at the Gordon Club. Maj. Gen. James Bryan, commander of Joint Task Force-Computer Network Operations and director of the Signal Corps Transformation, is the speaker.

Uniform is dress blue, white mess/blue mess, or dress green with white shirt and bow tie, and suit and formal dress for civilians.

Dinner is a buffet and starts at 7 p.m. Tickets are $25 and can be purchased from unit representatives or from Sgt. 1st Class Aaron Palmer at 791-3731.

Town Hall meeting

The next Gordon Terrace Town Hall meeting is 6-8 p.m. Tuesday at Freedom Park Elementary School.

Unit leaders who have personnel residing in Gordon Terrace are encouraged to attend this forum. Gordon Terrace residents are encouraged to attend. For details, call 791-8313.

Health benefits

A Government Employees Health Association representative will be here from 9-11 a.m. Thursday in Darling Hall Room 209. The representative will answer general questions concerning the GEHA coverage for federal employees. For information call Carolyn Ellis at 791-4179.

Give and take of AER

Yearly drive exceeds goal

Sgt. Sam Smith
Signal staff

Over the top. That's what happened May 27 when the generosity of the Fort Gordon community resulted in exceeding the Army Emergency Relief Campaign 2004 goal of $140,000. The final total of contributions was $142,193.61.

"Our unit project officers worked aggressively during the campaign to contact each and every Soldier, not only to request contributions, but to make sure that Soldiers know about and understand AER," said Diane Sarber, chief, Financial, Relocation, and Community Services at Army Community Service.

"Army Emergency Relief is the only private organization totally dedicated to taking care of Soldiers in times of financial crisis. Deployments of several units have made our fundraising much more challenging this year," she said. "Fortunately, other units have stepped up to the plate to make achieving this year's goal a reality."

In 2003 nearly 49,000 members of the Army family received more than $34 million in loans and grants; Fort Gordon Soldiers received more than $656,000.

Army Emergency Relief sections throughout the world are not limited to the funds they collect during the campaign. AER also receives funding from the repayment of the interest-free loans and investment income. The continuing replenishment of funds allows AER sections the flexibility to evaluate all valid requests for emergency financial assistance that meet regulatory criteria.

"The entire Fort Gordon community has united in the accomplishment of the campaign goal, but the incredible efforts of some units must be recognized," she said. Soldiers from Eisenhower Army Medical Center, the 15th Signal Brigade, the 206th Military Intelligence Battalion, and the Regimental Noncommissioned Officers' Academy should be especially commended for their selflessness and generosity, she said.

"These Soldiers are living proof that we are truly an Army of One," she said.

Though the AER campaign officially ended June 1, contributions are accepted year round. For more information on requesting AER assistance or how you can contribute to AER, contact Sarber at sarbert@gordon.army.mil, 791-1918 or at the AER link at www.gordon.army.mil/acs.

Time for mourning

Today was declared a federal day of mourning and the flag ordered flown at half-staff following the death of former President Ronald Reagan, the country's 40th president. Reagan died Saturday at the age of 93 and will be buried today in California. The flag will remain at half-staff for 30 days. A 21-gun salute will be fired adjacent to the Signal Center flagpole at noon. A 50-gun salute will be fired in conjunction with retreat at 5 p.m. Personnel are invited to observe the retreat ceremony at the flagpole. (For related stories, see page 9.)

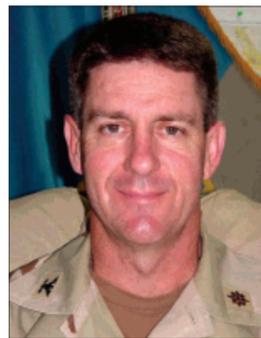

513th MI Bde. loses commander

A memorial service was held Wednesday at the Friendship Chapel for Col. Jon Jones, commander of the 513th Military Intelligence Brigade. Jones, 48, died Sunday at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Augusta after a year-long bout with cancer.

Jones assumed command of the 513th in July 2002, deploying with the Brigade to Kuwait and Iraq in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom. Jones returned to Fort Gordon from the Middle East in the summer of 2003. Jones continued his command after the diagnosis, displaying a true example of the Army's Warrior Ethos.

Along with the Fort Gordon community, the 513th MI Brigade will miss his leadership and presence.

Jones is survived by his wife, Cynthia, and two children.

Courtyard offers fun

Denise Allen
Signal staff

It's a school's out event for kids Monday at the Courtyard.

From 5 to 8 p.m., it's hot dogs, chips, ice cream and all the games kids want to play for $3.

Special events such as Monday's children's day are the norm at the Courtyard, a dining and entertainment center in the former Officers' Club.

"Our primary mission is feeding Soldiers who are TDY or taking courses such as Signal Officers Basic Course," said Chris Logue, manager of the Courtyard, which opened a little more than a year ago.

That may be, but the bigger crowds come in toward the end of the week when there's karaoke on Fridays and boxing every other Saturday. On June 5, it was Stum De La Hoya versus Allen Hopkins on the wall of big screen televisions.

There are Tuesday movie nights and other morale call events such as a recent Mardi Gras party with a Cajun buffet. The next morale call will feature miniature car racing at 4 p.m. June 24. There will be free food and door prizes.

So what should Soldiers do with their privately owned vehicles when they deploy, are at a temporary duty station, have a permanent change of duty station, or on leave?

Although not a major problem on post as compared to other installations, said Staff Sgt. James Stephens, 35th Military Police Detachment, traffic section noncommissioned-officer-in-charge, it is something they do need to contend with.

The problem is many Soldiers don't know what they are supposed to do with their vehicles in these circumstances.

"The best thing they can do is go to their NCO support channel," said

Stephens, "their first line supervisor, or someone that's responsible to look after their vehicle."

He said the key word is responsible, adding that Soldiers should make arrangements with someone that will park their vehicle in an area that's well lit, less likely to get damaged and where their NCO can check on it from time to time.

"If there is damage done to it, their NCO can give us a call. We'll come out, take a look at it and do a report," Stephens said.

He said it's a lot easier to do a report within 24 hours of damage being done than it is for them to wait until the Soldier has come back from 20 or 30 days of leave.

Fad diet may cause harm

Sgt. Sam Smith
Signal staff

It is proliferating on menus across the country, invading the grocery stores and cropping up in fast food restaurants — it's the low-carb diet.

With American and global obesity reaching epidemic levels in recent years, the low-carbohydrate diet fad has gained in popularity.

"Almost every patient we come in contact with is trying it," said Maj. Paul Carden, the chief of clinical dietetics at Eisenhower Army Medical Center.

With such a huge following, the big question is how effective is it? To answer this, the basic theory behind the diets must be explored first.

According to Carden, low-carbohydrate diets, such as the Atkins or South Beach diets, work by all but eliminating carbohydrates, the body's primary source of energy, from the diet. When your body is deprived of carbohydrates it goes into ketosis where the body fuels itself by feeding off of stored fat.

Because these diets are relatively new, there has been some study on their short-term effects but not for the long-term.

In the short-term, low-carbohydrate diets can lead to fast but not immediately dangerous weight loss.

Carden says, "we're not giving up or giving in." His stance is it may be all right for the short term but he does not advocate it for the long term. Furthermore, he questions some of the basic reasons why the diet works in the short term.

"If you take away carbs from your diet...all your starchy vegetables, rice, pasta...you're not left with a lot of choices. You don't have as much to choose from, therefore, you eat less," Carden said. "(Also, the people choosing the Atkins diet are more motivated about losing weight and are doing other things like exercising more."

One of the biggest criticisms of the low-carbohydrate diets is the amount of saturated fat they include. Studies have typically shown that high-fat diets may lead to heart disease, diabetes, and certain types of cancer.

"We still advocate a low-fat diet," Carden said. "You should talk to your doctor about health problems (associated with the low-carb diet, if interested.) It should be safe for a healthy individual in the short term."

O-Day winners

The 93rd Signal Brigade gathered at 6:30 a.m. May 27 not for physical training, but to have fun as the brigade celebrated its annual Organizational Day on Barton Field. The soldiers spent the day with family members and friends, eating and playing sports with one game after another including a guidon run, softball, flag football, basketball, Humvee pull and tug-o-war.

There was a talent contest, and the children had plenty to do with piñatas, 25-meter races, bubbles and ball throws. The day ended with an awards ceremony as soldiers from the 63rd Signal Battalion (pictured above) took home the first place trophy for being the overall champions, winning seven out of eight events during the day.

Courtyard

The Courtyard is open Monday through Friday for breakfast, lunch and dinner with buffets and ala carte items available. On Wednesday evenings, there is a steak buffet, and on Fridays, there is a seafood buffet.

After eating, there is plenty of entertainment available including video games, air hockey, chess and ping pong.

High tech entertainment includes a shooting simulator and a golf simulator, which allows the player to pick from four well-known golf courses.

The shooting simulator gives players options from sporting clays to big game.

The Courtyard is also expecting a NASCAR simulator soon.

Logue said once the NASCAR game is at the Courtyard, they may start televising weekly NASCAR events.

Despite all the activity going on at the Courtyard, people on post still don't know it's here.

Other fun and games located near the Courtyard include paintball and the outdoor pool.

For more information about the Courtyard, go to www.fortgordon.com/courtyard.htm or call 791-6000.

Operation Comfort succeeds

Two-year-old Tamia Baker and her four-year-old brother, Stonie Baker, seemed to enjoy playing with glue.

The pair were sticking together multi-colored geometric foam shapes and making their dad, Spc. Stonie Baker, a special Father's Day gift at Stevi B's pizza on June 4. The Company A, 67th Signal Battalion family readiness group, held the pizza party courtesy of funding from Operation Comfort.

At the beginning of the war, Army Community Service was inundated with monetary and in-kind donations, said Kathryn Palmer, ACS mobilization and deployment program manager.

Individuals, clubs and churches helped provide items from an afternoon sailing at Lake Thurmond to phone cards.

In-kind donations were placed in a database, and families could go to the location of the donated item to pick it up, as ACS didn't have the space to store all the items.

Monetary donations have been used for special get-together such as ice cream socials and pizza parties for family readiness groups.

Caitlin Christman, whose father, Capt. James Christman is commander of A Company and whose mother, Sandra Christman, is the family readiness group leader, said having outings was a good way to "make each other feel better and do something for the Soldiers."

Caitlin put her photograph on a card and decorated it.

Her mother had bought a lot of craft supplies from the foam cutouts to rubber stamps for the family members to make the cards which would become a part of a special CARE package to the deployed unit.

The June 4 pizza party may be among the last events funded through Operation Comfort, said Palmer.

As the war has continued, donations have slowed down.

Palmer said they've limited the amount of money that can be spent on events "so we can stretch it out." The pizza/card party cost about $150.

She hopes other donations will come in to give families an opportunity for other events during the long summer.

Donations may be made to Operation Comfort through ACS in Room 224 at Darling Hall. For information, call 791-3579.

Senior NCO board changed

Effective with the upcoming Master Sergeant promotion board, each eligible non-commissioned officer is responsible for ensuring that their promotion packet is correct. All enlisted boards will now be conducted using the Enlisted Selection Board System. The ESBS eliminates the hardcopy board file and presents the individual board file (official military personnel file, official photograph, enlisted records brief, and letter to the board president, if submitted) to the voting members as an electronic file. No paper copies will be used.

All NCOs eligible for a board must log on to the Human Resources

Command website at <https://www.hrc.army.mil>, click on HRC Indianapolis and then click on promotion file. Once in the promotion file, click on promotion ERB and follow the instructions. The promotion file ERB is an on-line version of the hardcopy ERB providing only data reviewed by the board.

If any of the ERB information displayed is incorrect or missing, the NCO must contact the Military Personnel Division Enlisted Records section at Darling Hall to have the correct data submitted to update the ERB. Updated information should be viewable on the on-line promotion file ERB within 48 hours of submission by the personnel office. This is the only method of updating the ERB.

Once the information is correct, NCOs must again click on "ERB validation" to authenticate their ERB. If corrections cannot be made, there is a feature to "validate with errors" and explain the discrepancy. NCOs should use this option only after all reasonable attempts have been made to update their ERB.

NCOs must be sure to not validate their on-file ERB if there are errors on it. Once the on-file ERB has been authenticated, the Enlisted Records section cannot make changes, so it is imperative that each NCO thoroughly check their file. If changes are required after validation, the NCO must contact the board eligibility section at bdsp@erec.army.mil or call DSN 699-3641.

NCOs are also encouraged to access and review their OMPF at the HRC website to ensure all performance, education and training, and commendatory documents are listed. OMPF update material must be forwarded by the Enlisted Records section to HRC-Indianapolis. Each document must include the Soldier's name and social security number.

Army One Source: One stop for all Soldiers' information needs

New to the military and want to know more about ranks and pay grades? Have questions about the community surrounding your new duty station? Need to find a kennel for your dogs during a temporary duty?

Find the answers to those questions and almost any other at Army One Source.

"We see this as an exciting resource especially for families that don't live close to an installation," said Vanessa Stanley, director of Fort Gordon's Army Community Service.

People who live on post are often more aware of ACS's services and how to access them.

Stanley said she sees this especially beneficial for families of Army National Guard and Army Reserves who have been activated for service.

The program has already been implemented at other Army bases including Fort Hood, Fort Stewart and Fort Bragg. It is being introduced at Fort Gordon this month.

To reach Army One Source, call (800) 464-8107 or go to www.armyonesource.com. The user ID for the website is army, and the password is onesource.

The website has chat room functions and offers articles on a variety of topics.

Other advantages to a website is it's available 24 hours a day, seven days a week in case a question came up over the weekend or during non-business hours.

Army One Source is staffed by a contractor provider Ceridian Lifeworks Services, which provides similar services to other Fortune 100 companies.

Other military branches including the Navy and Air Force have similar "one source" services.

In the future, they may all be combined into "military one source," she said.

Another benefit through Army One Source is referral to one-on-one counseling.

Through Army One Source, a family may receive six no-cost face to face counseling sessions for family issues, deployment adjustment problems and marital problems.

Counseling is confidential except in issues of abuse or in situations where the person is a threat to themselves or others.

President, Army's top leaders honors 229th birthday

I send greetings to those celebrating the 229th birthday of the United States Army.

Since June 14, 1775, our Army soldiers have fought for our Nation and defended the cause of liberty. Today's soldiers continue the Army's tradition of honor and excellence. They are serving brilliantly in zones of combat, spreading freedom to the oppressed, and keeping America strong and secure. Their selfless dedication and unwavering allegiance are the ultimate expressions of the American spirit. We are grateful for these brave patriots and their courage and willingness to sacrifice for our country.

On this special occasion, we recognize the men and women of the United States Army, both past and present, and their important role in our Nation's work to advance democracy, peace, and freedom around the world. Their efforts help ensure that the blessings of American liberty endure for generations to come.

Laura joins me in sending our best wishes. May God bless you, and may God continue to bless America.

On the fourteenth day of June in 1775, the Continental Congress established our Army. In the 229 years since that day, our Army has proven itself on countless battlefields as liberty's best friend and oppression's worst foe.

Since its birth—over a year before the Declaration of Independence—the United States Army has played a vital role in the growth and development of the American nation. From winning our new nation's independence in a tough eight-year fight, to preserving the Union through the tortuous struggle of the Civil War, through the global conflicts of the 20th Century, our citizens can draw great satisfaction from knowing that whenever the nation was in need, our Army answered the call.

Sixty years ago, in the Army's birth month of June 1944, our brave Soldiers stormed ashore at Normandy to begin the final thrust to liberate Western Europe. While that beachhead was expanding, our Soldiers liberated Rome, made gains against Japanese invaders in New Guinea, struggled against terrain, weather and a tough enemy in Burma, and reinforced the U.S. Marine Corps on Saipan. We celebrate our veterans of 1944 on this 229th Army birthday, as we also celebrate the service of our younger U.S. veterans who fought in Korea, Vietnam, Panama, Iraq, Afghanistan, and other conflicts.

Today's Army is the greatest land fighting force in the history of the world. This spring, we completed the largest troop movement since World War II, while continuing our engagement in Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom. Our Army is serving in more than 120 countries, conducting missions across the spectrum of conflict from humanitarian assistance to combat operations. While at war, we are continuing to change our Army to meet the needs of the current and future strategic environment.

Our Army is strong, and this strength comes from our greatest asset: the American Soldier, whose courage, compassion, and determination have for generations been the bedrock upon which our victories have depended. In all that the Army has accomplished, and all that it will be called upon to do, the American Soldier remains the single most important factor in our success.

We are proud of you, our Army family—Soldiers, civilians, retirees, veterans, and your families, and you are always foremost in our prayers and in our actions. Thank you for your service, for your sacrifices, and for your steadfast devotion to duty. Your courage, dedication, and selfless service to the nation are the hallmarks of the United States Army.

God bless each and every one of you and your families, and God bless America.

Take time to remember

Maj. John Beaulieu
Air Force News Service

Three and a half years ago, while driving from Washington, D.C., to Augusta, Maine, my sister called me on the cell phone. "You better hurry, the nurse says he doesn't have much time left." My heart sank because I was only halfway there.

As I raced north, images of my father flashed in my mind: cheering me on from the stands when I hit my first homer; shoveling snow near the gas pumps at his tiny convenience store; yelling "Atta boy, John!" at my high school and college graduations; sleeping in his favorite chair with a Pepsi between his legs and the news on the TV. . .

A few hours later, I was at my father's bedside.

In just three weeks, pancreatic cancer had turned my strong, happy, barrel-chested father into a weak, sullen, old man. Dad and I had a few precious moments together before the end.

Of all the photos of my Dad, my aunt chose his World War II Army photo to hang at the wake for all to see. Nearly all of my father's six brothers and four sisters regaled me with many familiar stories of Dad's exploits "in the service."

In 1943, my father, Ronald Beaulieu, was a new corporal in the 11th Armored Division of Patton's 3rd Army. Although he was trained as a forward observer and scout, most of the time he was a driver for junior officers or sat behind the wheel of a "Duce-and-a-half" or a halftrack in a convoy.

On one particularly long drive, Dad had a one-sided debate with an officer about U.S. geography.

"How can you say that Maine is not the biggest state in the union?" he said to the officer. "You don't know what you're talking about, sir."

Obviously, my father was a proud but very ignorant New Englander, and Dad's captain was very patient because he, a Texas native, just let my father drone on.

My father was very proud of his unit's achievements. Fighting in "The Bulge," crossing the Rhine and liberating the Mauthausen-Gusen Concentration Camp complex were the three he spoke of most often. The latter was his proudest moment.

Rumors had spread through the Army about German atrocities, but when my father pulled up to the outskirts of the concentration camp, he was shocked by the horror.

He told me years later, "I know you've seen pictures of the Holocaust, but they can't show you what I saw, what I smelled, and what I felt. The suffering there was far beyond my worst nightmare."

Because my father's first language was French, he spoke with several victims face-to-face and couldn't believe the tales they told him. That day, my father gave away nearly everything he had.

My father and five of his brothers served their country in World War II. Like Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, and Airmen today, he traveled to a foreign land to fight for people he had never met against enemies that threatened us on many fronts. Like his brothers, he volunteered to do this, and he served with distinction.

I'm proud to be my father's son, and grateful to wear the uniform of my country. Although my father's generation has been called the "Greatest Generation," which I don't dispute, I like to think that their legacy and their spirit continues in the hearts and minds of those who serve today.

Despite the stories of abuse, wrongdoing, and neglect in our nation's military, I hope Americans see that there are thousands who do their duty, who do the right thing, and serve with distinction as well.

According to the experts, we are losing World War II vets at a rate of one every 70 seconds. I hope you take time to remember them.

Editor's note: Maj. John Beaulieu is with the Air Force History Office.

Marks: Don't let acts of few degrade legacy

Maj. Gen. James A. "Spider" Marks
TRADOC News Service

By now, we have all reached the point of overexposure to the pictures and events that occurred at Abu Ghraib Prison. These images will not go away soon . . . nor should they.

We are, and continue to be, a values-based institution. Do not let the horrific and disgusting acts of a few besmirch or degrade the legacy of professionalism and honor you continue to display everyday as you conduct your critical mission in the defense of our great nation.

The Military Intelligence Corps is an integral part of our great Army. Our nation and our Army will continue to rely on us, as they always have.

Do not question yourselves, your competence, your training, or our values ... you are required to do what's right everyday.

Do not question yourselves, your competence, your training, or our values ... you are required to do what's right everyday. Do not hesitate to act. Drive on!

Pfc. Armando Monroig

Is Iraq ready to take control of its country June 30?

Looking at the state of the country right now, whoever is going to take control of power won't be able to keep control of the country because of the separate militant groups.

St. Julian Cox
Community Health Nurse at the Health and Wellness Center

They should be given control because if we don't give them control of their government they're never going to run it on their own. We should supervise them to make sure that they don't make any unwise decisions since we have had more experience with running a democratic government.

Sgt. Virgal Bressner
116th Military Intelligence Group

No, I don't think they're ready because there are too many of the rebels still there.

Spc. Debra Bird
513th Military Intelligence Brigade

I don't think we should be there. They don't appreciate us, making these sacrifices, all of these Soldiers coming home in body-bags. I say, yes they're ready. Let them go ahead and have their country. Get us out of there."

Georgia Guard provides G8 Summit security

Master Sgt. Bob Haskell

Special to American Forces Press Service

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. — It isn't baseball, but Georgia Army National Guard Brig. Gen. Terry Nesbitt is managing or commanding two large teams at the same time this week during a very public international event taking place on coastal Georgia. It's called the Group of Eight, or G8, Sea Island Summit for the leaders of the world's major industrial countries.

It's not the Olympics or the World Series, and Nesbitt's teams are on the same side for the 30th G8 Summit. Security against terrorists and demonstrators out to make trouble is their main mission.

Nesbitt is the first National Guard general to do what he is doing. That involves commanding Army and Air National Guard troops on state or active duty status and Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen and Marines on federal, or Title 10, status.

President Bush and Georgia Gov. Sonny Perdue had to approve the idea of a single commander for military forces on state and federal duty.

"The idea is to provide unity of command and unity of effort for support of the G8 Summit," Nesbitt explained. "It is being looked at, I think, as a model for future homeland defense and homeland security operations so that same unity of command can be put in place to support other homeland security operations or other special events."

President Bush is hosting the summit, which is being held in this country for the fifth time. Security is one of the biggest concerns while world leaders discuss economic, political and security issues.

The National Guard is one of the major participants. Guard troops from Georgia and 12 other states, split into two major task forces, are supporting local law enforcement agencies.

It is the biggest security event for the Georgia National Guard since the 1996 Summer Olympics in and around Atlanta.

(Army Master Sgt. Bob Haskell is assigned to the National Guard Bureau, Arlington, Va.)

POVs

If a vehicle appears to be abandoned, sits in an area for a long time, with tires going flat, spider webs on the vehicle, MPs are going to take a closer look at the vehicle.

According to Fort Gordon Regulation 210-3 an abandoned vehicle is one that's been parked in one area for more than 24 hours without movement.

"A lot of times we have Soldiers that PCS or ETS and they just leave their cars here because they don't know what to do with their vehicle, or they just don't want it anymore," said Stephens.

He said if this is the case, rather than just leaving the vehicle somewhere on post, they can call the Traffic Section Office because they may be able to help the Soldier make arrangements to dispose of the vehicle properly and get some money out of it.

Derelicts, said Stephens is another scenario they handle.

"If a vehicle is broken down, and a Soldier doesn't have money to fix it, we'll give the Soldier a call," he said adding that the best solution to this problem is for Soldiers to take their POV to the Auto Crafts Center on post which might be more affordable.

Deployment is a big issue when it comes to POVs, because a few Soldiers will leave their vehicles in the barracks parking lot up to six months.

TDY and hospitalizations are other reasons vehicles are perceived to be abandoned, said Stephens.

If a vehicle belongs to a hospitalized Soldier, special consideration will be taken and the vehicle will not be towed.

Before a vehicle is towed, Stephens said they do research such as looking at the license plate, post decal, vehicle identification number, asking those in the vicinity where the vehicle is parked for information on who the owner might be.

"We exhaust every means necessary to find out who that car belongs to," he said.

If an owner cannot be identified, an abandoned vehicle notice is placed on the POV. After 72 working hours, the vehicle is impounded.

An inventory of the items inside the vehicle is done in hopes of finding information on whom the owner might be.

The vehicle is then taken to an off-post holding area. It costs $80 for the tow to the impound lot and $20 per day for impoundment fees.

To get the vehicle back the owner has to pay the fees.

He said many of the cars that are supposedly abandoned are from deployed Soldiers who don't take the proper precautions such as putting their POV in their unit parking lot that's provided for them.

"They hand it off to their buddy and their buddy is not responsible and let the car go in disrepair," Stephens said. "We'll go out and find it, call the rear echelon NCO to come get this car and they'll take care of it."

He said that is where the perception comes from that abandonment is a big problem on Fort Gordon.

Although it is not a big problem it does have an impact on the MP force on post.

"It may take us anywhere from three to nine hours of work per vehicle (to locate who the owner of an apparently abandoned vehicle might be)," said Stephens.

When a vehicle does get impounded it may take up to an additional four hours to get that done, he said, taking time away from more important missions.

The best thing Soldiers can do, said Stephens, is make sure their POV information is current and up-to-date (tags, license plate, post decal), and their units have this information.

Stephens said the traffic office may take a look at 50 vehicles a month. Out of that number, up to six may actually get towed.

If unit commanders or first sergeants believe they have abandoned vehicles in their parking lots, call the traffic office at 791-3247.

Army leads military support for Reagan state funeral

Joe Burlas
Army News Service

WASHINGTON – Every 30 minutes between 6 a.m. and 5 p.m., the 3rd U.S. Infantry Regiment (The Old Guard) salute battery has fired a single 105-mm blank round at Fort Myer, Va., and will continue to do so through today.

The daily 21-gun salute is just one of the Army's many requirements in rendering final honors to former President Ronald Reagan, who died June 5 at the age of 93.

The Army is the Department of Defense's executive agent in providing all required military support for state funerals. With the most ceremonial troops in the D.C. area, the Military District of Washington has been designated the Army's executive agent for the funeral.

To execute that responsibility, MDW stood up a State Funeral Joint Operations Center at Fort McNair, Washington, D.C., June 7. It consists of more than 20 representatives from Army organizations that are playing a major role in the funeral ceremonies and representatives from the other armed services and the Department of Homeland Security.

"You have to remember that this is the first state funeral in about 30 years and it is occurring after 9-11," said Lt. Col. Jeff Davis, until recently MDW's operations branch chief who is now serving as the JOC day shift battle captain.

"These days you have to worry about more than just the ceremonial stuff – you also have to play 'what-if' and have plans that consider terrorism and force protection issues," he said.

While Davis could not get into specific details on those plans due to security, he did say teams are in place to respond to any emergency.

Lt. Col. Eric Rodriguez, recent Northern Command Medical Support Command mobilization officer and now JOC medical support liaison officer, said that he has already coordinated with local military and civilian hospitals to execute some of those plans if necessary and teams are already standing by to deal with anything from minor cuts, bumps and bruises and heat casualties to potential mass casualty situations.

Even the Old Guard's Caisson Platoon is ready for emergencies.

"Our Soldiers are going be great out there, but the horses can be unpredictable," said Chief Warrant Officer 3 Abdul Johnson, platoon leader for the 1918-era horse-drawn artillery unit. A loud noise may startle the horses, he explained, but the most experienced riders in the platoon have been picked for the state funeral mission and they will be able to handle any startled horses.

A four-man section of the platoon received Reagan's coffin from a hearse, loaded it onto the artillery cart and proceed to the Capitol late afternoon Wednesday where the president's remains lay in state in the Capitol's Rotunda. Reagan will lie in state for public viewing until shortly before his funeral service at the National Cathedral today.

Other members of the Old Guard were part of the Joint Service Color Guard leading Reagan's procession to the Rotunda; others marched behind the caisson; some formed an honor cordon on both sides of Constitution Avenue with cordons from other services leading to the Capitol; and some joined other services' honor guard in protecting the remains lying in state.

Staff Sgt. Will Reinhard, an Old Guard squad leader with 3rd Platoon, A Company, said his troops spent most of Tuesday prepping their dress blue uniforms for a full dress rehearsal later in that day while leaders were being briefed on their responsibilities at another location.

Reinhard said he was aware that Reagan briefly served as a private in the Army Reserve prior to getting a direct commission and serving in the Army Air Corps during World War II.

"Our participation in this state funeral and the fallen Soldiers we intern on a daily basis is an honor," Reinhard said. "It is saying thank you for your service and is a tribute from one Soldier to another."

Reagan's inauguration set tone for change

Jim Garamone
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON – It really was like "Morning in America," as some of Ronald Reagan's campaign commercials suggested.

Jan. 20, 1981, was a cold, gray morning here, but the atmosphere was exciting. Hundreds of thousands of people gathered on the west side of the U.S. Capitol – a first – for Reagan's inauguration.

In addition to the Republican Party faithful who flocked to the ceremony, hundreds of thousands of Washingtonians came too. This was the "Hollywood" event for a movie-star president.

Rumors flew fast and furious on that cold morning about "the hostages" – the 52 Americans captured on Nov. 4, 1979, when Iranian students broke into the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

For 444 days, the cloud of the hostage situation in Iran loomed over the Carter administration. In April 1980, five American servicemen were killed and seven wounded in the botched "Desert One" rescue attempt. The American eagle seemed powerless.

But between the election on Nov. 4, 1980, and Inauguration Day, there was a flurry of negotiations with the Iranians for the release of the hostages. News outlets were expecting the release at any moment, and people in the crowd overhearing others speak of the situation would ask, "Anything new?"

But noon came with no word from Tehran, and power shifted from President Carter to President Reagan.

The world of 1981 was far different from today. The Soviet Union was still communist. Leonid Brezhnev was the undisputed ruler of what Reagan came to call "the Evil Empire." The Soviets occupied Afghanistan and subjugated all of Eastern and most of Central Europe. The Warsaw Pact confronted NATO along the Iron Curtain.

A total of 350,000 American servicemen were based in Europe to counter the Soviet menace. But the American military was not a very effective force. Thousands of mid-level enlisted people and officers – exactly the people needed to make the military function – were voting with their feet. The all-volunteer force, then less than 10 years old, could not offer the pay and benefits to attract or keep good people.

On the civilian side, inflation was running in double digits, unemployment was rising, and crime concerned Americans. President Carter said the country was suffering through a "national malaise" and seemed powerless to do anything about it.

In stepped Reagan. After taking the oath of office, Reagan strode to the dais. As the new president began his inaugural address, the sun broke through the clouds. A woman in the crowd said that even Hollywood couldn't have written a better script.

But what followed was even better. In his speech that afternoon, the new president injected confidence into the American people.

Reagan also said America would fight for what it believes in. "As for the enemies of freedom, those who are potential adversaries, they will be reminded that peace is the highest aspiration of the American people," he said. "We will negotiate for it, sacrifice for it; we will not surrender for it, now or ever."

During his term in office he went on to accomplish many things. He rebuilt the U.S. military. He played a part in Middle East peace. He called on Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to tear down the Berlin Wall. He negotiated the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty with the Soviets.

He did many things, but his first day in office set the tone for his presidency. That day, he inspired Americans to dream again.

Small French village hosts American liberators

Hugh McBride
Army News Service

STE. MERE- EGLISE, France – In a world of uncertainty, one constant remains sacrosanct: Ste. Mere-Eglise loves its liberators.

Six decades after the D-Day invasion started in the pre-dawn skies over this small village near the Normandy coast of France, tens of thousands of celebrators packed the narrow streets of Ste. Mere-Eglise to commemorate the onset of Operation Overlord and to once again thank the men who rid the region of its Nazi occupiers.

"I've never seen such appreciation for America," said retired Army Col. Albert Wells, whose father, Bud Wells, trained fighter pilots during the war.

Wells was one of the thousands who filled the square around the town's historic church, where paratrooper John Steele hung for more than two hours over German-patrolled streets after snagging his chute on the steeple in the early hours of June 6, 1944.

Throughout the daylong celebration, bands played from a variety of stages (including a Dixieland sextet on the back of a World War II-era Army truck), military re-enactors mingled with their real-life counterparts, and couples literally danced in the streets of what on most days is a quiet village with an appreciation for its history.

But this, clearly, was not most days.

"It's like the Fourth of July," said Robert McAndrew, who said he was in Normandy to fulfill a promise to his late father, World War II Veteran Richard B. McAndrew. "I told him that if he didn't live to be here ... I would represent him at the 60th."

Also paying prominent homage to their forbears were the 602 U.S. airborne forces who parachuted onto a drop zone near the "Iron Mike" memorial on the outskirts of town.

The paratroopers (including members of the 82nd and 101st Airborne divisions, which led the 1944 assault) descended upon the region in a series of drops from C-130 Globemaster and C-17 Starlifter aircraft, and then – still sporting their battle dress uniforms – merged into the crowd that was walking toward what one jumper termed the "sacred ground" of downtown Ste. Mere-Eglise.

"If you're a paratrooper, you learn about this place from day one," said Sgt. 1st Class Peter Crittenden, who drove from Stuttgart, Germany, with fellow members of the 1st Battalion, 10th Special Forces Group (Airborne) to participate in the jump. "This is the holiest of holies for the airborne," he said.

Standing almost in the shadow of the steeple of which he had read and heard so much for so long was, Crittenden said "an overwhelming experience." But the best part of being there, he said, was the opportunity to talk with the very men who prided this town from the iron grip of Nazi occupation.

"It's all about the veterans here today," Crittenden said. "This is their day."

One look around Ste. Mere-Eglise was all it took to verify that statement.

Winding one's way through the throngs of celebrators was difficult, but getting near a veteran verged on the impossible. Ringed by well-wishers wherever they went, the veterans signed autographs, posed for photographs, and accepted the handshakes and hugs of well-wishers whose only desires were to get close enough to stay "thank you."

"It's beautiful to see such an international outpouring of support for these men," said Mary Casey, whose father, Robert C. Casey, piloted a glider into the area on D-Day. Standing beside her father amid the adoring crowds of Ste. Mere-Eglise was, Casey said, "very moving indeed."

Proving that "moving" has more than one meaning for a veteran in Normandy, John Roman spent much of the afternoon dancing in the street with his bride of 58 years, Jacqueline. Married on the second anniversary of D-Day - two years after John helped liberate Jacqueline's home town - the Romans return to the Normandy region nearly every year to celebrate their wedding day and remember those whose lives ended there.

"You feel the tears coming," Roman said, yet as he shook hands with a steady stream of passing service members and civilians - or twirled his wife at the end of another dance - it appeared to at least one onlooker as though this veteran's means of acknowledging the sacrifices of his comrades-in-arms was to love the life that they had provided for him.

Watching her parents share a laugh with a group of passers-by, Jackie Thompson said they had earned not only their joy, but also the appreciation of those who followed.

However, like many of his generation, she said, her father appreciated but deflected what he felt was undue praise regarding his efforts while in uniform.

"He always said the ones who didn't make it were the heroes," she said.

Hero or not, as he twirled his wife and waltzed her into a street filled with service members and civilians celebrating one of the great achievements of America's "greatest generation," Roman appeared to be as in love with Ste. Mere-Eglise as it was with him. (McBride is a member of Task Force Normandy 60 Public Affairs)

The struggle for meaning in life

Chaplain (Maj.)
Stephen Russ

15th Regimental Signal Brigade

All of us, at times in our lives, have struggles we must deal with. For some, it's at work; for some, it's at home.

Others have to struggle in the community for acceptance.

Still others struggle to keep the faith when they are confronted with trauma. We will always be faced with doing the right thing, or taking the more popular easy choice of self-convenience. All these issues are part of this existence we call life.

God and our faith community do not abandon us in our struggles. We are reminded in the scriptures of the great promises. Stories are written about individuals who overcame tremendous odds and regained balance in life. Others suffered through the pain of loss and discovered new life to experience.

The person of faith does not confront struggles alone. There are many persons available to assist in time of struggles. The key to assistance is a simple request. When the individual is unable to ask for assistance then we go to him or her.

While I write this article, we are at war with terrorism. We witnessed recently the violent and senseless act of an innocent man being decapitated. I watched in disbelief the event shown on the evening news. I thought of his family and friends, and asked why?

What are you struggling with this day? What difficult issue or person are you trying to give meaning to? You are not alone. Look around and ask for assistance. God and the community of faith are available. No one has to suffer alone in life. The people of faith are representatives of God who showed us the path to honest and moral behavior.

I cannot promise you will never struggle for meaning again. I affirm you will. I share with you, however, that the struggle for meaning produces mature disciples who are committed to change the world for the good of all. Our struggles in life can and will reveal our weaknesses. It is up to us to take advantage of those moments and become stronger in our faith.

We cannot give up on our struggle for meaning. Wrestling with our faith helps us to understand our passions and hope. We are given great examples of individuals who made it through difficult times. It is through their examples that we, the living, find strength in moments of confusion and doubt. They made it, so can you.

Let us continue our journey to find meaning from our struggles. If you are having difficulty with an area of your life, contact a chaplain, counselor, family member or friend. We are ready to assist you in your journey of life.

Military spouses pursue careers through DeCA

Rick Brink

Defense Commissary Agency

FORT LEE, Va. – The commissary has been more than a great place to shop and save money for Andrea Chisholm, who has worked at three different commissaries in the past eight years as she and her family moved about the world to fulfill the demands of military life.

Chisholm, a meat department worker at the MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., commissary, is one of more than 3,200 military spouses who perform a variety of jobs in commissaries and other DeCA activities around the world.

Spouses of active duty military members make up 20 percent of DeCA's workforce, according to Brant Smith, DeCA staffing and employee development specialist. The total is up 4 percent from 2002.

Military spouses bring to the DeCA workplace a depth of knowledge and understanding of the commissary's role in military life, Brant said. They have a vested interest in the commissary benefit and they find challenging and rewarding work in DeCA.

In just two years, Wendy Devove, wife of a Marine gunnery sergeant, transitioned from an office secretary to a contract specialist at DeCA Headquarters. She had completed her graduate education and moved to the Contracting Business Unit job through an outstanding scholar program.

"Working for the government over the years, to include my experience here at DeCA, has allowed me to reach goals that were difficult yet rewarding," said Devove, who in 14 years has worked in a variety of jobs for Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine organizations.

Janea Anderson, another DeCA Headquarters employee, said her job as a division secretary suits her situation fine as her husband, an Army captain, attends a course at the Army Logistics Management College on Fort Lee. She had worked as a training technician in a prior assignment in Germany.

"Working within government service enables me to transfer to a comparable grade level and series wherever my husband is stationed," Anderson said.

"Commissaries are located at every major installation, so the next time we move, I will definitely check out the DeCA job vacancies. It's nice to work for a defense organization that I see as a great asset to military families."

Chisholm said the proximity of commissaries where her family has lived and the Defense Department's spouse preference hiring program have enabled her to continue working at what she enjoys.

Chisholm's husband, Antonio, is an Air Force senior master sergeant with 25 years in the service. The family was stationed at Ramstein Air Base, Germany, in 1996 when she started her civil service career in the meat department. When the family moved to Offutt Air Force Base, Neb., she worked in the commissary as a cashier and in the warehouse before a position in the meat department opened up. She began work at the MacDill commissary as a cashier and last June she returned to the meat department where she has subsequently been promoted to meat cutter.

"As one of our newest cutters, Andrea has continued to excel and would be a valuable asset in any area of the commissary," said Joyce Parish, the MacDill meat manager.

Rain delays championship games

Pvt. Jaime Daugherty, C-369 outfielder, takes a short pitch during the second game of the best two out of three women's championship games Tuesday. C-369 will face EAMC Monday in the third and deciding game.

Sgt. Sam Smith
Staff writer

The 2004 Fort Gordon Women's Softball Championship for the evening league will have to wait until next week to crown a winner.

The best two out of three series was left tied 1-1 after Tuesday's games. C Company, 369th Signal Battalion, easily won the first contest by the 10-run rule, which states if after the bottom of an inning if one team leads the other by ten or more runs they automatically win.

Unfortunately for C-369, the Eisenhower Army Medical Center team rallied in the second game to bring the series to an if-game which should have been played the next evening.

Then, the rains came. A puddle, which was about two inches deep at its worst point, started by first base, rounded second, and stopped at third.

"The old way was to pour gas or diesel in the puddle or get a helicopter," said Al Robinson, the sports coordinator, about getting rid of the water. "But we couldn't get one, and you can't burn anything these days."

The if-game, along with the morning games scheduled for Thursday, have been postponed until next Monday.

Even though this delay drags the season out a little longer, overall this was a very short season for the evening division of women's softball.

The season started with only three teams competing, the two playing for the championship plus D Company, 447th Signal Battalion.

D-447, however, dropped out of the league leaving only two teams in play, the regular season was declared over and a best two out of three championship scheduled.

"If we get three or more teams, we go with it," Robinson said. "Some may say (it's not worth it), then these females would've never had this opportunity to play, and they seemed to be enjoying themselves."

Fort Gordon grapplers grab trophies

Special to the Signal

Two Fort Gordon grappling team members competed and placed in a World Jiu-Jitsu Association tournament May 8 in Walterboro, S.C.

Staff Sgt. Michael Gipson, 442nd Signal Battalion, and Spc. Derek Cobbs, 15th Signal Brigade, competed in the heavyweight beginner category, with less than one year of training.

Gipson placed first in the division and was undefeated winning the final bout in overtime. Cobbs placed third in the division losing to Gipson early in the event. In a close fight that was decided on one 2-point reversal Gipson won their match.

Following his matches in the heavyweight beginner category, Cobbs moved up to the intermediate heavyweight category where he faced fighters who had been training for one to two years. Cobbs finished with a 2nd place trophy in the intermediate category.

"Cobbs is very competitive and loves the challenge," said Capt. Sean Mann, 73rd Ordnance Battalion, team coach. "I was not surprised when he decided to move up a level."

Gipson and Cobbs have been training with Mann, a 5th degree black belt, at Gym 5 since last summer and will be testing for green belts in June along with other members of their class.

"I am proud to have such dedicated and talented students," said Mann. "I wish everyone in the class could have competed. They all would have done well."

Anyone interested in the class should contact Gipson at gipsonm@gordon.army.mil

Let the games begin

Brig. Gen. Greg Premo, Fort Gordon deputy commanding general, throws out the first pitch at the Fort Gordon little league season opener Saturday. Premo says it's been 50 years since he first stepped out on a field for little league to play 'America's Sport.' He adds baseball teaches you teamwork and other skills important in life.

What's the key to transformation? Many things, not the least of which is decision superiority. Getting the right information quickly, and using it effectively. That's what WIN-T is all about. With secure, wireless, COTS-based Internet technology, providing unmatched situational awareness and information superiority, WIN-T gives our soldiers some much needed certainty in an oftentimes uncertain battlespace. Team WIN-T, led by Lockheed Martin, understands the importance of such technology to our warfighters in the 21st century battlefield. And we're ready to support the Army's vital, enduring role in our nation's security.

Cleaning house!

MPs use training facility to hone skills, prepare for challenges that may lie ahead

Signal Staff

Warfare takes many shapes and faces. Throughout history there has been proof of this: World Wars I and II, Korean War, Vietnam, and Desert Shield/Storm.

And to deal with the changes the military and its servicemembers has to adapt.

This is no different in our present conflicts, the War on Terror in Afghanistan and Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Soldiers are going into urban areas in search of the likes of Osama bin Laden – encountering many dangers along the way.

Soldiers encounter dangers that – without the proper training – can be deadly.

That is why 10 Soldiers from the 35th Military Police Detachment participated in shoot-house training on Range 10 from June 1 through Friday.

A shoot-house is a structure used to simulate a domicile, such as a four-bedroom house, so Soldiers may practice the proper way of entering, clearing and evacuating a dwelling.

The outer walls of the structure are bulletproof steel with the interior walls covered in plywood. Bullets hit the steel and are caught by the plywood on the ricochet.

Soldiers learn to work in teams of two, from entering the shoot-house, to entering each individual room, to identifying non-combatants from combatants and dealing with them properly.

Pfc. Heather Howard, 35th MP Det., said participating in the shoot-house training was fun, exciting, and informative.

“I thought it was good training that we all definitely need as first responders,” she said.

Howard said training simulated the intense scenarios she may one day come across as an MP whether it be reporting to a domestic violence incident or searching for terrorists in Iraq.

She said while going into a room, trainees could find two or three subjects in a room and have mere seconds to determine who the threat is and what they have on them.

“They could have a bottle of water or an M-16 in their hands,” said Howard adding trainees had to make sure they didn’t shoot non-combatants or themselves.

Howard said this type of training could be compared to what the S.W.A.T. team of a local police department would do.

Training began with Soldiers running through a room of the shoot-house as a team, eventually running through all rooms. Initially they do so without ammo.

Next, MPs used simunitions or projectiles similar to paint-balls while using their 9mm pistol.

Training culminated with a live-fire run-through with two teams of two MPs clearing all rooms of the shoot-house, using real ammunition.

Staff Sgt. Mark Doran, investigations supervisor for the 35th Det., and noncommissioned-officer-in-charge of the shoot-house training, said this training is a confidence builder for the Soldiers.

“This gives them not only confidence in themselves but also in the people they work with,” said Doran.

Doran said the ultimate goal is to get all Fort Gordon MPs through the shoot-house training so they are prepared if they find themselves in a place like Iraq someday.

Normally Special Operations, Special Forces, and Rangers conduct this type of training on a regular basis, said Doran, but due to the War on Terror, MPs are doing the same.

“This is something every MP unit should be doing,” said Doran.

This is the second time this type of training has been done on Fort Gordon.

The Special Reaction Team from Fort Stewart, Ga., trained with Fort Gordon’s SRT in April when the facility opened.

Sgt. Emir Batista, 35th MP Det., said this is good training that gives a Soldier the opportunity to learn how to react and make split-second decisions like whether or not to take someone’s life.

He said it is also a good way for new Soldiers who have never fired a weapon before in doors to get comfortable with it.

Capt. Earl Cochran, 35th MP Det., company commander, said his Soldiers did great during the training.

He said the goal is for the patrol supervisor and his patrolman who may encounter a situation, to have the ability to go in and neutralize the enemy and at the same time not harm civilians, said Cochran.

“They can’t wait for SRT (Special Reaction Team). If it’s happening right then and there, the patrol supervisor needs to know he can take his Soldiers, put them in that house or building, and clear it effectively, without getting people hurt and taking out anyone that wants to hurt us,” he said.

Cochran said having the shoot-house is not only a great asset to the Soldiers on Fort Gordon but also to local law enforcement agencies who use it as well.

He said all the training the MPs do, including defensive driving, defensive tactics and the shoot-house, is training his Soldiers can take with them wherever their travels might take them.

“In the end, they’ll have all the skills so they can survive in any environment,” said Cochran.
